TELEPHONE No. 321.

A Cape Calamity

Nothing injured but the prices. 80 finest Capes in the front rank of style and the rear rank of prices. Some from Paris, some from Berlin, others such close copies that "shady" houses would say, imported.

Capas braided, and beaded, and piped, and perforated, and appliqued, and laced, and ribboned, and embroidered. No blacks. All colors.

There is no language strong enough to properly exalt value over cost and yet when we mention the price—$2.75—the whole story will seem a myth. But it's a mighty fact, our word for it. The price is positively way, way below what we actually paid for the Capes. But out with them where they belong. Bargain Table No. 1, Monday, and Tuesday—if.

The loveliest Parasols at prices that draw as strongly as old Sol himself does. Sold at the Main Entrance.
